Yesterday was the first time I considered the fact that the term would end at some point, and that it was possible my day to day routine would change when that happened. It made me realize how I usually plan possible options for the next term or break when I'm stressed, and everything is uncertain enough that's just not an option, so I haven't even considered it. I tried to think about even the far enough future that things will be back to relatively normal and it's much harder to consider.
