I decided to continue taking piano lessons during this term, and of course, it's not the same. We still had our bi-weekly piano studio classes when we each play our pieces we have been working on, and it made me sad from time to time that I cannot listen to my friends' pieces in person. There is something special about listening to music live, and I truly miss that. I also always talked about how much I hated human interactions, but this made me realize that I don't hate people as much as I thought!
